

Institute For Thermal Processing Specialists

IFTPS is a not-for-profit organization, established exclusively for the purpose of fostering education and training for those persons interested in procedures, techniques and regulatory requirements for thermal processing of all types of food or other materials and for the communications of information between its members and other organizations.

The Institute provides a central organization for communications and education for its members in the field of thermal processing. This objective is accomplished through conferences, workshops, newsletters and internet communication. Further, the Institute promotes study and research in the field of thermal processing and its impact on the public and the industry. It is also dedicated to the responsibilities of persons concerned with or performing activities in thermal processing.
